LOCAL INFORMATION

Szeged is the city of sunshine, nice people, and great cultural programmes.

The town of Szeged, situated at the confluence of the rivers Tisza and the Mures, was already inhabited in the Stone Age. It takes its name from the fact that the river Tisza describes a large right bend at the centre of the town. It was mentioned as a town in the Aranybulla (Golden Bull) of 1222, as it was granted the right to store salt by King Béla IV of Hungary. It became a free royal town in 1498. Its continuous development was interrupted first by 144 years of Turkish rule (1543-1687) and then by the great flood of the Tisza (13 March 1879). At that time, only 265 of the town's 5723 houses remained intact. In three years, a new modern town was built with donations from home and abroad. In gratitude to the donating European cities, the Grand Boulevard bears the names of the cities. Its current population is 160,000.

Activities in and around Szeged

Since 1970, the ruins of Szer's monastery have been excavated, and the open-air Ethnographic Museum has been built as a monument to the folk architecture of the lowland landscape, with its exhibition halls and yurts displaying natural history curiosities unparalleled in Europe. In 1995, the Monument Park was given a worthy place for the monumental, restored circular picture of Árpád Feszty and his contemporaries.
- Trip to Palič (SRB)
Palič is located 8 kms from Subotica and about 38 kms from Szeged. Lake Palič, the pearl of Palič, covers an area of about 380 hectares.
